

Shri Khandoba Temple, Aurangabad.

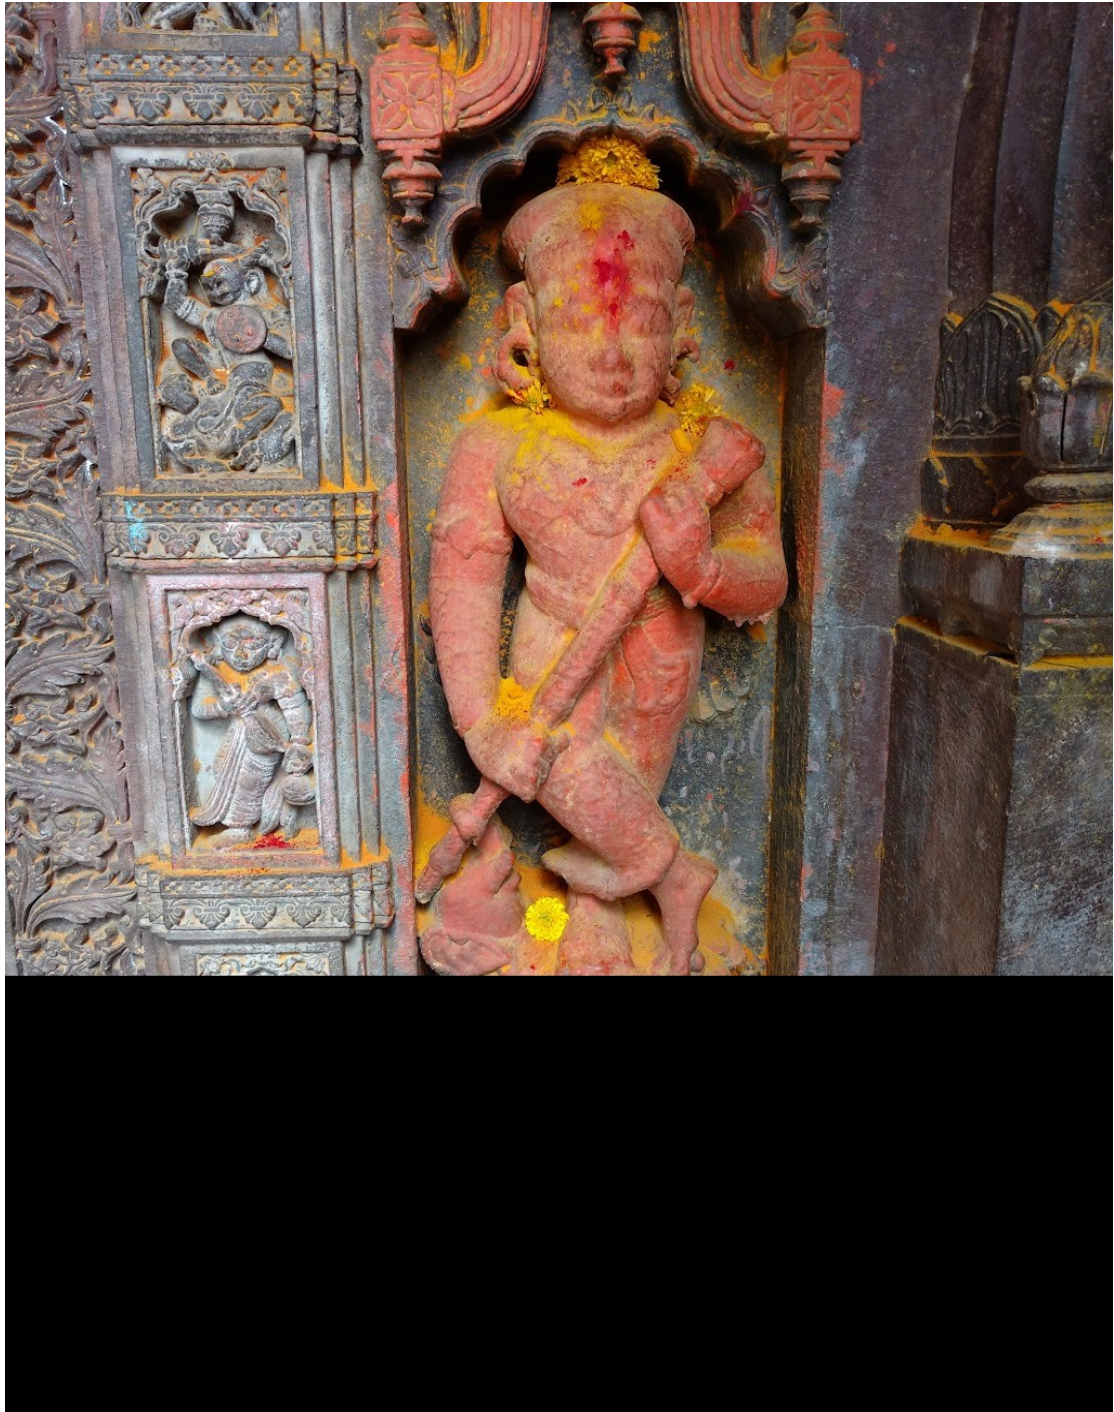

Khandoba yatra is observed annually on the occasion of Navaratra. About 4-5 lakh devotees from across the state are expected to visit the temple between December 12 and 21. Quite an ancient temple. Ornately carved spiers and exterior. Ideal for a break from the noisy streets of maintown Aurangabad.

for more info about this temple & place with photo in marathi please vist jejuri.net/khandoba/#satareth 17th century temple needs renovation at the earliest. "Side walls of the temple have already developed cracks. Other parts of the temple are also in a dilapidated state and might cave in any time owing to lack of maintenance.

The centuries-old Khandoba temple located in Satara Parisar now reopen for devotees as a newly married couple enter the Khandoba temple to perform traditional rituals after the state government has given permission to open religious places in Aurangabad on November 18, 2020.

Shri Khandoba Temple located in Aurangabad, Maharashtra. Avarage rating of this place is 4.60 out of 5 stars by 1368 votes. The street address of this place is Satara, Aurangabad, Maharashtra 431005, India.

This temple is one of the oldest temple around Aurangabad. Temple sculpture is very unique. It is wonder that in those ancient days, without any modern techniques, such wonderful carvings are done. Temple premises is clean. The temple is situated at the bottom of huge hill making it very scenic. From inside temple is built with black stone but surprisingly it is very cool.

A religious place which holds belief of so many people around and away from it, that they worship here alongwith the pure heart. As this place is situated at a little above, it has a good view on the left side of the temple. Ample space to sit with friends and family, with a hopeful heart and peaceful mind. If you're an outsider, do visit when here in Sambhajinagar (Aurangabad)

This is one of the best historical temple of Aurangabad city.\nIt is in the Satara village which is surrounded by number of hills and all greenery everywhere.\nIt is the temple of the god Khandoba Maharaj (Malhar Martand) who is kuldaivat of most of the Marathi Maharashtrian people.\nYou can always find the peasant and peaceful atmosphere there across the year.\nIt is a very famous and holy temple in the region.\nBig fair is arranged at the temple every year, thousands of people comes to take blessing and enjoy the fair at Satara temple.